

ARGUMENT IN 'LEAK' CASE IS DELAYED

Deaths of Justices White and Gould Force Postponement For One Week.

Argument in the Government's case against the four men indicted in the United States Supreme Court leak cases has been delayed a week because of the deaths of Chief Justice White, of the United States Supreme Court, and Justice Ashley M. Gould, of the District Supreme Court, which occurred within thirty-six hours of each other.

Justice Gould was the trial judge in the leak cases and his interest in them was fully as keen as that of Chief Justice White, involving as they do the fundamental principle of whether it is a felony to surreptitiously obtain the most vital secrets of the highest court and use them for stock market speculation purposes. Demurrers on the indictments of the accused—Ashton F. Embury, former private secretary of Justice McKenna; R. E. Moses, a lawyer; E. M. Mayer, a broker, and J. Harwood Graves, formerly an employee of the Department of Justice, were to have been argued a week ago, but Justice Gould's illness forced a postponement.

The Government's case is based principally upon information resulting from an investigation conducted by the Washington editor-in-chief, general manager of the International News Service.

U. S. IS EATING MORE AS PRICES HIT TOBOGGAN

Americans are eating more now, says Federal Reserve Board reports today said quantity sales of groceries show big increases over last year.

In money values, groceries, both wholesale and retail, in all parts of the United States, show a decline in aggregate receipts from sales.

The answer to this, officials said, is the consumer is beginning to get some real benefit from the price cuts made in farm products. The consumer is due for still further reductions, said the board, as prevailing prices in markets and stores are not low enough to correspond to the wholesale reductions.

BOOTLEGGERS' JOY FESTIVAL STARTS

700 Dry Agents Quit—Kramer Expects Second Forty-Day Flood.

What officials privately admit will be forty field days for rum-runners, bootleggers, and other artisans of the liquor business began yesterday with the laying off of 700 prohibition enforcement agents because Congress did not appropriate enough money to pay them.

John Kramer, Federal enforcement officer, admitted frankly today that his force probably will be unable to cope with the situation, and it is expected that violations will be in vogue on a large scale until July 1. Congress, he said, must bear the blame, if blame there be.

"There is no denying," said Kramer, "that it is a setback for the cause of prohibition. The whiskey traffickers probably will make good use of the opportunity. It is most regrettable, but it can't be helped, apparently."

While enforcement officials were considering ways and means of stretching their inadequate net to meet the emergency, the drys, headed by Wayne B. Wheeler and his Anti-Saloon League cohorts, appeared before the House Judiciary Committee to protest against beer-for-medicine proposition.

The Palmer ruling under which beer of 4% per cent alcoholic volume could be manufactured, and sold for medicine was bitterly attacked by the drys. They asserted that it opened the way for widespread "cheating" of the Volstead law.

BARE LEGS WELCOMED ON GOLDEN GATE BEACH

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 21.—"Let your conscience be your guide," appears to be the slogan governing bathing suit styles at Venice and other nearby beaches. The shape, color and size of beach costumes are left to the maids who wear them. Short, one-piece suits in all colors, without stockings, predominate. Many tourists are terribly shocked by what they see on the beaches here, but they stick around.
